Preamble

Following approval of Constitution changes at the 2023 AGM, the elected Junior Executives now hold portfolios, rather than being elected (voted) into specific roles.

This recognition of the moving career and family commitments of the executive, allows for dynamic workload management of the executive portfolios, as needs and availability changes. This role flux also builds and enhances capability within the junior executive.

This position profile document covers the two junior executive portfolios, detailing the key responsibilities specific to each portfolio and the relationships, salary and performance aspects that are common across all portfolios.

* In keeping with the changes proposed to the Constitution at the 2024 AGM, the four elected Senior Executives, will decide the portfolio allocation between themselves, ensuring coverage of the President, Vice-President and Treasurer portfolios, with the fourth elected Senior Executive taking responsibility for a portfolio that best represents their current position in the RMO lifecycle.

The four elected Junior Executives will each take responsibility for a portfolio that best represents their current position in their RMO journey. Portfolios will be determined in consultation with the Senior Executive.

Thus, the Training Representative, Non-Training Representative and House Officer portfolios are detailed in both the Senior and Junior Executive position profiles.
